

(sic) Cottage was uninhabited, but ten years later it was called Dafney Hall and ten years after that Daphne House. Samuel Rope (1810-1882) grocer and draper, was the occupier at both the latter censuses.

Sources: Julian Foynes, 'East Anglia against the Tricolor, 1789-1815'. Poppyland Publishing, 2016.

The author also gave me several references to follow up to complete the story, for which I am very grateful. Online: 'Register of Letters of Marque against France 1793-1915' and 'Facts Opposed to Falsehood in the Prize Case Clarissa'.

Orford and District Local History Bulletin, Issue 12, 2009, 'George Culham, the noted smuggler', and additional research notes taken for that article but not used there.

Maps in Orford Museum Office, Potkins Lane, Orford – Earl of Hertford's properties in Orford 1779, by Crow and Marsh, and an undated map showing Daphne Cottage.